Introduction

We all get better at things when we practise them. These tests are intended to allow you as a student to have a trial run, before something real happens in class, which may end up being graded in some way.

If you are using these tests, you should note:

- always give yourself a chance to succeed. There is no point in doing a test if you haven't learned the stuff first.
- given that these tests are being used for practice only, always check your own answers from the tables and SQN lists in your books.
- don't try to second-guess the process. Some of the questions here appear identically in the real tests, while others don't. Just because something appears in a practice test does not guarantee whether it will or won't be in the real thing.
